

Today's Introit takes from Psalm 47 verses 10,11 & 2. We review them scripturally then understand them in relation to today's feast.

Psalm 47 is paraphrased: "God is greatly to be praised for the establishment of His Church." This Introit contains the full scriptural verses.

10. We have received thy mercy, O God, in the midst of thy temple. 11. According to thy name, O God, so also is thy praise to the end of the earth: thy right hand is full of justice.

In verse 10, St. Robert Bellarmine hears the people admitting the great things God has done, and continues to do for His Church, is not due to their own work, wit or merit, but merely to the mercy of God. 'The stability of thy church, and other innumerable favors which we heard were promised, and now see realized, have come from your hands, and not ours.'

In verse 11, St. Robert hears the echo of verse 2: "Great is thy name...". Again, as the name of God was made known to all the world, by God's great & wonderful deeds, in the establishment & propagation of His Church, so also is Christ praised "to the end of the earth" because "thy right hand is full of justice;" for God's justice, in rewarding good and punishing wicked, is justly extolled all over the world. Nor should we think that God's hand "full of justice" is without mercy; but rather in his hand there is no room for injustice ("for the Lord is just in all his works" Ps 144).'

2. Great is the Lord, and exceedingly to be praised in the city of our God, in his holy mountain.

In this verse, the prophet praises an edifice, "in the city of our God" by first praising the architect, "Great is the Lord." "Exceedingly to be praised" suggests an ability beyond all angels, all men, or any of God's works... so vast the chasm between the finite and the infinite. St Robert says, of all revealed things, 'there is no one thing that can give us a greater idea of God's greatness, or for which we should praise and thank Him more, than the establishment of His Church' which the prophet observes, "in the city of our God, in His holy mountain." Last, the Saint will have us observe two remarkable characteristics of the Church: 'although comprising all nations, each differing in language, manners, customs, & laws, it remains united in one profession of one faith, and the use of the same sacraments, so as to form one people - nay - even one family; and, although founded on Peter, 'a poor, ignorant, rude fisherman, the Church remains so firm that the gates of hell cannot prevail against her; for, in spite of all... she will ultimately arrive in safety to the land of promise.'

The Feast of the 8th Sunday after Pentecost recalls our membership in the Church, "whereby we cry: Abba" and our stewardship under God (Gospel). The Introit speaks to the first: "we have received thy mercy, O God, in thy temple" then the second: "According to thy name,... thy right hand is full of justice" for God's justice shall weigh the value of our stewardship in fulfilling His will. May we live more eager for heaven than as others who seem alive only to earth... knowing "God is exceedingly to be praised" nor can He be outdone in generosity.

Also, it has come to the haggard pastor's attention that blessed items (even those with name tags) are being removed from the blessing table, and not by their rightful owners. Our Lord said, "If your hand causes you to sin, cut it off." Hmmm?

There is a certain erroneous opinion inborn in mortal men that increases evil doing and lessens good. It is the belief that whatever comes into our possession in this life we possess it as masters of it; and so when the chance arises we seize these things as ours by special right. The contrary is true. For we are not placed in this life as lords in our own houses, but as guests and strangers, brought hither whether we would or not, and at a time not of our own choosing. He who is now rich in a moment is a beggar. Therefore, whoever you may be, know that you are but an administrator (dispensator) of things that are Another's, and that upon you has been bestowed but of their brief and passing use. Cast then from your soul the pride of dominion, and put on instead the modesty and humility of a steward. ~ St. John Chrysostom, 407 †

Without repeating everything that we have already mentioned, it is appropriate first of all to emphasize the following point: for the Church, the first means of evangelization is the witness of an authentically Christian life, given over to God in a communion that nothing should destroy and at the same time given to one's neighbor with limitless zeal. As we said recently to a group of lay people, "Modern man listens more willingly to witnesses than to teachers, and if he does listen to teachers, it is because they are witnesses." St. Peter expressed this well when he held up the example of a reverent and chaste life that wins over even without a word those who refuse to obey the word. It is therefore primarily by her conduct and by her life that the Church will evangelize the world, in other words, by her living witness of fidelity to the Lord Jesus- the witness of poverty and detachment, of freedom in the face of the powers of this world, in short, the witness of sanctity.
